

Many first-year engineering students have difficulty managing their time effectively, leading to stress.